“ Brian developed esophageal cancer and had a tube put in so he could eat. He began to eat japapeno peppers and found out that he could eat them and for some reason that helped. The feeding tube was removed and he had less trouble with taking in the food.. some things he still could not eat but still tried. Back and forth with the eating and progressed at times where he could do other things. A bout with an experimental product gained him some weight and helped him for awhile. a tube placed across his stomach was rejected and had to be removed. He basically went downhill from that.

He could explain to a person how to repair a car, etc but could no longer had the strength to do the work.

Brian also wrote poetry (one of which was included in the obit) and some which is at Texas Oncology. Thanks to people there and especialy to Jenny and to Dr Stone. RIP Brian. We loved you
